Bing

The move to community-based organizations is a shift away from institutionalization and towards more personalized care and support for individuals with mental or physical disabilities [1]. Community-based organizations (CBOs) are non-profit organizations that provide a range of services to individuals in their local communities, including healthcare, education, and social services [1]. CBOs are often staffed by volunteers and are funded by donations, grants, and government programs [1].

The move to community-based organizations has been driven by a number of factors, including advances in medical technology, changes in government policy, and a growing recognition of the importance of community-based care [1]. The goal of this shift is to provide individuals with greater autonomy and control over their own lives, while also improving the quality of care they receive [1].

I hope this helps. Is there anything else I can help you with?

Source(s)

1. Community-Based Organizations | CDC Foundation
2. Recovery Starts And Ends With Community-Based Organizations
3. Organization Development for Social Change: An Integrated Approach to ...
4. Boosting the Sustainability of Community-Based Organizations
5. Three Key Lessons To Improve Community Collaborations - Forbes